

Rainbow

(Jessica Falk/Stephen Haughey)

When I think of you in the days of wine and song
A heart on fire with a burning desire to right the wrong
Now people turn their backs on you, or look the other way,
You were there so many times, for everyone, for me
It's a war between the good and bad, and they're too blind to see

When I hear your voice I can feel the cold wind cry
Down empty streets and the icy meadows of the winter sky
And it makes me want to run to you, take you in my arms,
Take you from that frozen world and melt away the pain
In the warmth of the summer sun and the gentle summer rain

CHORUS

Take a look up in the sky, don't it make you want to fly?
Can't you see the colors way up high?
Can't you see them dancing in the rain
In the light of my eyes
Can't you see the rainbow in the sky?

And if someone should promise you a lifetime in the clear
Well brother what kind of life is that - telling people what they want to hear?
A broken heart takes time to mend, it's a long, lonely run,
But I can promise you that I'll be near, mmm,
When you need me (I'll be there)
And we'll leave the cold, step out, into the sun

CHORUS

Take a look up in the sky, don't it make you want to fly?
Can't you see the colors way up high?
Can't you see the colors in the rain
In the light of my eyes
Can't you see the rainbow in the sky?

All those colors dancing in the rain
In the light of my eyes
Can't you see the rainbow in the sky?
Can't you see the rainbow in the sky?
